'Rowing Home' with Margaret Bowling

Tasmanian Ocean Rower Margaret Bowling talks about rowing the Atlantic, tackling the treacherous Bass Strait and her continuing mission to row home. Join us to hear Margaret talk about these incredible rowing adventures and be inspired!

The Story: Margaret was the first Aussie woman to row the Atlantic in 2007. The 73-day voyage brought immense challenges, from severe water rationing, a dangerously close tanker and a rudder that broke 19 times.

In 2011 Margaret took on the Atlantic again, this time dealing with a beached boat on the edge of the Sahara and a diet of protein bars when food supplies ran out.

Margaret's latest adventure in January 2012 was an attempt to row the Bass Strait. Just 3 days into the journey her small crew encountered horrendous storm conditions, bringing the expedition to a premature end.
